

2022 Stahlman Beekeeping E-mail Notes Issue #47a

90 degree weather to freezing temperatures -- I hope this newsletter finds you warm as I am with a warm cup of coffee. TV news looks pretty bad for those living in the snow belt along the Great Lake Region. I hope all you you have completed your fall beekeeping task and are ready to start planning for the arrival of next spring.

This weeks news item is short. I have included a chart showing the winter season. My plans are to continue writing, reviewing what I have written, and try to make the new articles meaningful.

If you enjoy reading these articles, they are free to anyone requesting to be put on the mailing list. If you have a friend that you would like to share these notes with, you can invite them to request to be put on the email list. Several beekeeping clubs place these articles on their web pages. If you are a club these articles can be posted or used in materials the club provides to its membership. I will be adding supplements to newsletters for new beekeepers beginning in January 2023. These supplements will be Powerpoint presentations I have used for teaching bee schools in the past as well as the full text of Beekeeping 101 Handbook and guide for beginning beekeepers. This text was used by a number of bee clubs for their bee schools. It is no longer in print. Out of print copies can be found from time to time on EBAY.

Dana