

2023 Stahlman Beekeeping E-mail Notes Issue #37a

This is list 1. One more article on beeswax before I move on to fall management. I don't try to market beeswax products but those who do, find it enjoyable and profitable. My use is strictly used to re-wax plastic foundation and on occasion make up some 1 ounce blocks for gifts.

I have several bee talks coming up shortly. Some fall bee schools are being held in North Carolina and many clubs are gearing up for spring bee schools.

North Carolina State University is offering a series of classes and so far, David Bailey (Bailey Bee Supply) has sent me some details on a bees school being offered here in Raleigh. David is an outstanding instructor along with a number of North Carolina Master Beekeepers he has listed as instructors. Contact him at: info@baileybeesupply.com.

If any of you are teaching bee classes, I am willing to list them on a regional basis. Check out bee schools in your area and recommend them to anyone you know who is wanting to start. Now is the time to start thinking about next year. When asking to be listed, provide location (state and county), names of instructors -their qualifications, and cost.
