

2023 Stahlman Beekeeping E-mail Notes Issue #38a

It is getting a bit hard for me to find topics to write about that have new material. This past week I spent most of a week in New York City without my computer. But had I taken it with me, I would not have had to time to use it. So I arrived home yesterday with a talk coming up on Saturday in Winston Salem on beeswax --I still need to refine my Power point presentation. And then this newsletter. I had a full schedule each and everyday. Yes, a lot of subway riding, taxi when the subway wasn't handy, and a driver that helped me get around --- from the airport back to the airport. (My son-in-law). I saw a couple of shows on Broadway, visited the 9-11 Memorial & Museum, the statue of Liberty and a Hudson River Cruise. I am still walking around with "I Am, I Am" singing in my brain. And some idea that I might learn to do the moon walk. The one thing I will not miss is the rush to get from here to there! And the impact of visiting the 9-11 had a profound lasting effect on how I will feel after visiting ground zero and thinking anything can never be as bad as that single event. Nearly 3000 lives lost and some still dying.....

Thus, the pictures and thoughts I have put into this issue. With all I experienced, I still had time to think about honeybees and now time to do a little research on the Spotted Lantern Fly that believe me or not, has a connection to honeybees! Think "honeydew!"
